

The Carter-Jenkins Center presents

Humberto Nagera M.D.

Director, The Carter-Jenkins Center

Psychoanalyst, Children, Adolescents and Adults

Professor of Psychiatry at USF

Professor Emeritus of Psychiatry at University of Michigan

Severe Marital Discord, Divorce & Their Consequences

Part 2: Clinical Examples

Scheme of the Normal Oedipus Complex of Girls (First and Second Stage Excluding the Inverted Part)

First Stage	Second Stage
PHALLIC-OEDIPAL	OEDIPAL
Positive     MOTHER + + + FATHER - - -   (a)	Positive     FATHER + + + MOTHER - - -   (b)
Negative     mother - father +   (c)	Negative     mother + father -   (d)

FIGURE 1

The double/quadruple relationship and how it may get acted-out

- Father is abusing the object the girl has chosen at this stage. Notice too, that the father is the hated rival at this point. His abuse of the mother during this stage can make her fear/and or hate the father and later on all men, in spite of being attracted to them sexually.
- This situation may make a full move to the second stage (oedipal) much more difficult, and fearful. One solution is a masochistic development, so that she will enjoy abuse if she was to receive it, either from the father or later on from other men. Indeed she may provoke it in the end.
- Another is a potential inclination towards women since they are loving and men can be abusive and frightening i.e., a possible homosexual inclination.
- A strong feminine component in her bisexual constitution will still move her to the father and later on to other men, but with significant ambivalence, fears and other problems through identification with the abused mother, a residual fear and hate of men, all of whom sooner or later will come to represent the abusive father. It is from this group that some of the “avengers” will be born. Examples follow soon.

Idealized Father	Denigrated Father	Idealized Mother	Denigrated Mother
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>-Normal for the stage</li> <li>-Father loves her not mother</li> <li>-Mother is a rival</li> <li>-Girl hostile to mother</li> <li>-She be a better wife</li> <li>-Wants to have child of father</li> <li>-If mother is the abusive one, attachment to father stronger</li> <li>-How are any of the above factors modified in case of abuse by the father?</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>-Because of discord, fights, abuse etc</li> <li>-Father is at the same time a frightening figure</li> <li>-Natural conflict between her interest in father and what she is exposed to leading to a strong masochistic development that thus preserves interest in father (1)</li> <li>-Simultaneous identification with sadistic father (2)</li> <li>-Variations that can occur when mother is the aggressive, abusive one</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>-At this stage mother is the rival and as such idealization is less likely</li> <li>-But if daughter is abused too she may empathically idealize the mother and fear the father</li> <li>-One possible solution again is a masochistic one</li> <li>-Another, is an unconscious identification with the aggressor</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>-Natural for an Oedipal girl (3)</li> <li>-Likes to get mother out of the way so that she can have father(4)</li> <li>-At this age aggression may not have the same meaning. Ex of Hamps-tead "Get out of here"</li> <li>-Better her than me</li> <li>-Father loves me, particularly if he is not abusive to the girl but the contrary</li> </ul>

SECOND STAGE
Girl Oedipus
complex

Severe marital discord and its consequences for children

- 1) Role of the possible early identification with the masochistic aspects of the mother and what it can lead to later on in their lives. How they provoke their partners...
- 2) Notice the shifting positions (according to what aspect of the mother-father relationship is being re-enacted) and what behaviors that leads to.
- 3) Notice the unconscious fantasies that girls may develop in order to explain the father's anger and abusive behavior towards the mother. Mother must have done something. These fantasies will vary according to the age of the child. In older children, that something that mother must have done may be fantasies of her having being unfaithful to father. Such fantasies, are commonly acted out later on by these females, frequently leading to the destruction of what may have been a satisfactory relationship, marriage etc.

DIVORCE AND ITS CONSEQUENCES

- As many as 40% of the men and women (that were children of divorce) in the Judith Wallerstein study never married
- They cohabitated with somebody, or had serial lovers, while others led solitary lives (W. 289) *
- Wallerstein saw it as the inevitable consequence of our “divorce culture”
- There are only 40% of married people today in this country and numbers are going down all the time

* Wallerstein, J., et al, Unexpected Legacy of Divorce, p.289

DIVORCE AND ITS CONSEQUENCES

- Divorce is hardly ever a friendly procedure and what leads to it, is not either. Thus, many consequences follow from this:

a) Children have frequently witnessed angry verbal or physical fights and abuse. Children are frightened, sad, worried that the parents may leave, divorce, hurt each other and so on. Some fear going back home from school, not knowing what they may find, or fearing the violence that may erupt

b) They may play various roles, such as mediators, confidants, defenders (verbally or even physically) of an attacked mother for example

Severe marital discord and its consequences for children

- c) The battles after the divorce may adopt different forms i.e., blaming, denigrating, undermining or bad mouthing the other parent or forcing the children to take sides etc
- d) Not paying child support, not keeping appointments to pick up the children or for visitations
- e) Drilling the children about the other parent life, boy-friends, girlfriends and the like or exposing them to new lovers, sexual promiscuity. These events will determine too their adult behavior

SEVERE MARITAL DISCORD, DIVORCE AND THEIR CONSEQUENCES

- Children frequently feel that they are responsible for their parents divorce or fights attributing it to their disobedience, bad behavior, poor grades at school or what not
- This is particularly true of children still in the egocentric stage of development. Remember too, that children under 12 years of age have at best a partial understanding of these problems
- Adolescents are more mature. They may be able to look at the moral problems involved, while drawing lessons for their own futures

Summary of dynamics and clinical examples

- The role of the oedipus complex.
- These girls make multiple and simultaneous identifications with various and different aspects of the behaviors of the parental couple (both fathers and mothers). In a way it is as if they have developed multiple personalities.
- Sadism (identification with mother/sadistic father couple).
- Masochism (identification with abused mother).
- Identification with other behaviors of the mother*
- The avengers: ( a special type) out to take revenge and punish men who are bad and the tormentors of mother and by extension of the patients who have identified with their mothers. Some examples will show the sadism, masochism and other factors (simultaneously) involved in these behaviors.
- Nobody controls me or isolates me**
- Turning passive into active***
- Do not love me phenomenon (5)

Other dynamics and clinical examples

- Some of these women are very skilful and successful at seducing men. They seem extremely pleasant, interested and concerned. They act for as long as necessary as very loving, helpful and committed to the man they wish to attract. This behavior continues for a while in the newly established relationship. It goes without saying that they behave in extremely sexually seductive ways. Yet, at the same time that they are playing this role, they may be simultaneously deceiving that person by being actively involved in seducing other men, or in actual sexual relationships with other men, while still pretending to the uniqueness of the relationship with their “victim” (for lack of another word).

Other dynamics and clinical examples

- Once the “victim” is trapped so to say i.e., has fallen genuinely in love with her, which of course they would be fully aware of and had been promoting very actively, they make manifest in one way or another, their double or triple game of infidelity and the falsehood of their previous demonstrations of affection and love for the given man.
- As you will expect this is a devastating and traumatic experience for the men so deceived. At times, these girls rationalize their behaviors. Such rationalizations are on occasion quasi delusional (if not completely so) but quite commonly their destructive sadistic intent and provocation is not any longer hidden but quite in the open.

Other dynamics and clinical examples

- In a case I am familiar with, when the surprised and devastated partner asked the girl friend in astonishment at her deceit “Why are you doing this? The callous answer was “ because I want to!” which would have been fine, had she not purposely misled this man the way she had done for a very long time. In fact she had gone for a week of sex to some resort or another with her new found friend! These women, in the very few cases I am familiar with, may have repeated this or similar behaviors 6 to 10 times or more in the course of just a few years! In the one case I have in mind, this particular girl usually came back after a short while after this dramatic and revolting piece of acting out claiming repentance (?) and full of promises of how devoted she would be from that moment onwards, only to have repeated exactly the same behavior later on in several other occasions.

Other dynamics and clinical examples

- The sad thing about all this, beyond the obvious and unnecessary pain occasioned to their male partners, is that behind this piece of acting out there is on occasion potentially truly loving and quite wonderful persons that can never realize themselves, given the acting out that their inner conflicts force them to constantly repeat.
- Somewhat modified forms of the above acting out seem possible for men too though it seems less frequent..

Other dynamics and clinical examples

- Trying to examine what triggers of these dramatic events and behavior changes in these girls is not at all easy, but some factors can be discerned:

In some cases, particularly the case of what I have called “the avengers” they are simply forced to punish all men to whom they may relate since they become sooner or later a representative of the abusive father. In extreme cases of this type, that alone may well be the essential factor. Such girls are constantly recreating this scenario with multiple men, like an obsession. I do not think that they are consciously aware of what it is that they are planning to do, because if that was the case, at least some of them, which are essentially and deep down good persons, will not be able to go on with these behaviors. Example given before was possibly of this type

Other dynamics and clinical examples

- In the more benign cases of this type though, at one point or another their new valentines are cast in the role of the abusive fathers, perhaps through some behavior that triggers off some resemblance with the paternal figure. In other cases they construe an scenario where they feel victimized and abused (the masochistic identification with the mother).
- One of them will suddenly state for no apparent reason to her boyfriend “I do not want to be your week end fuck” or something in such style (though they were the active promoters of the sexual relationship and some of these men genuinely love them).

Other dynamics and clinical examples

- At other times what triggers the behaviors is the realization that they are really loved by the men they have chosen. That is a no-no, since as we have seen they can not do better than their mothers, in their love life with men. Clearly too, in the deceit that soon follows there is an element of turning passive into active, they are not going to be “abused” like their mothers were, but they are the abusers, while at the same time they are punishing men for the abuse their fathers inflicted on their mothers. Here frequently one can see the sadistic intention to hurt the other person, which I believe includes in some cases the actualization of what these girls thought (unconsciously) where the wishes of their mothers, that is the wish to hurt their husbands any way they could, including for example being unfaithful to them (that had been so abusive) and in whose web for many reasons they feel caught. Another such girl, suddenly and out of nowhere, started shouting at the boy-friend “I hate you”, ”I hate you” with a lot of anger attached to these words (she was at the time running around with another man). Apparently there was no much of a reason for such an outburst and the boyfriend was flabbergasted at this, deciding to leave for good just there and then. Two hours later she was on the phone calling for help since she had managed to involve herself in some sort of accident that required his help!

Other dynamics and clinical examples

- That one can see some of the positive loving elements in some of these women, even under this tragic circumstances, makes the whole thing all the more sad. Remember that many of the women that are so forced to act out, may have had themselves a loving relationship with their fathers at some point or another. As mentioned, that makes some men desirable partners and with some of them at least and if only for a short while, a viable relationship. (See W p.286). This oedipal fact is specially highlighted in a case that I am very familiar with, where of the approximately eight or more relationships that this lady was known to have had, three of them were with men older than her, 25 to 45 years older! Further these relationships developed in most cases in a matter of days. Two of them started “secretely” (the deception) while she was pretending to be in a loving relationship with somebody she had been involved for quite a while.

Other dynamics and clinical examples

- Remember too, that women are as much sexual animals as men are, contrary to the common pretence among some of them, that sex is all men care about and want from their partners. Here is the mechanism of projection as their defense against their own sexuality and lack of genuine interest on their male partners whatever the reasons that may have led them there.
- The oedipal victory: In a way you could say that symbolically they got the father that had abandoned the mother but that they may have been very attached too, for themselves later on in life. Perhaps, out of oedipal guilt these relationships are not viable either.

Other dynamics and clinical examples

- Undoing of father's behavior: At the same time they seem to be undoing mother's choice of an abusive partner when they find a reasonable man, which unfortunately they can not tolerate for long either, for the various reasons we have already discussed.
- In all these cases, it always operates as well, the factor that they are condemned to do not better than their mothers in their relationships to men, which unfortunately constitutes a permanent and ineludible prohibition. They are thus compelled one way or another to destroy their amorous liaisons. Sadly, all of these points to the extraordinary complexity in human behavior, deceitfulness, and human relationships. Sadly too it deprives these women of a lasting loving relationship, a family and possibly children.
- The patient in question, after having listened to many of the explanations that his analyst was offering of the behavior of this girlfriend, that he so badly wanted to understand since he has been so much in love with her said one day: I hope you are right. The problem is that you analysts try to explain and justify all kinds of behaviors. May be the answer is a lot simpler e.g., there are somewhat better people (not perfect of course) and some not so good human beings! Perhaps he was right!

Other dynamics and clinical examples

- The patient in question, after having listened for years, to the many explanations that his analyst was offering about the behavior of his girlfriend, that he so badly wanted to understand, since he had been so much in love with her, said one day: I hope you are right. The problem is that you analysts try to explain and justify all kinds of behaviors. May be the answer is a lot simpler e.g., there are somewhat better people (not perfect of course) and some not so good human beings! Perhaps he was right!

Bibliography

Goldman, M.W. (1974) Addie. In: A Child's Parent Dies, ed. E. Furman. New Haven: Yale Un Press, pp. 140-148.

Kalter, N., (1990) Growing Up With Divorce, Helping Your Child Avoid Immediate And Later Problems, Ballantine Books, USA

Wallerstein, J., and Kelly, J.B., (1980) Surviving the Breakup: How Children and Parents Cope with Divorce, Basic Books Inc, New York

Wallerstein, J., and Blakeslee, S., (1989) Second Chances: Men, Women and Children a Decade After Divorce; Who Wins, Who loses and Why, Ticknor & Fields, New York

Wallerstein, J., Lewis, and J.M., Blakeslee, S., ( 2000) The Unexpected Legacy of Divorce (A 25 Year Study Landmark), Hyperion, New York

Furstenberg, F.F., & Cherlin, A.J., (1991) Divided Families: What Happens to Children When Parents Part, Cambridge Massachusetts: Harvard Universities Press

Utah's Governor Marriage Report

Web page of the Census Bureau of the U.S is a valuable resource

The Internet is a valuable resource for this subject but care needs to be exercised as to the sources, motivations for the publication, etc

Severe Marital Discord, Divorce & Their Consequences

Part 2: Clinical Examples

A Carter-Jenkins Center production

THE END

copyright 2007

